

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

It is not in the public interest for a large corporation to use the airwaves free of charge to engage in one-sided political propaganda such as the program that is about to be aired.

We need to strengthen our licensing of broadcast media to reflect what the station is actually doing. A simple postcard to extend broadcasting privileges is not enough.
